

To Whom It May Concern,

Physician-assisted suicide is not humanitarian, but reduces humans to mere animals.

We must keep the dignity of human life uppermost in our minds. It is possible, with modern medicine, to relieve pain without killing a person. As humans have souls and intellect, life is sacred, and must be preserved at every stage.

We must learn from history and realize that each threshold that is crossed in the legal system that allows the use of humans for any purpose other than God's plan of nature opens the way to experimentation that can result in bizarre and dangerous results.

Must we repeat what other nations have done in this regard? Remember and study the effects of similar legal decisions in Germany in the last century.

Keep the dignity of the human uppermost in mind, and preserve human life in every stage of its development.

Sincerely,

John and Helen Edmond
